Bernard Noon, Sr.

Bernard Noon, Sr., former widely-known Butte attorney and resident of this city for many years, died recently at a Denver, Colo., hospital, where he had been ill since February, according to word received here yesterday. Mr. Noon was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage last winter while on a business trip and was taken to the hospital.

Mr. Noon, following his graduation from the law school at the University of Iowa in 1895, located in Butte. He was a nephew of the late P. A. Largey and was for a number of years manager of the Largey estate, which owned and operated the Speculator mine. Mr. Noon was one of the organizers of the East Butte, Tuolomne and Pilot Butte mining companies. Of late years he was connected with mining in Colorado and Arizona.

Funeral services and buriel will take place in Exira, Iowa, Mr. Noon's old home. His body will be accompanied by his widow and brother, Bruce Noon. Surviving relatives are Minnie Whitty Noon, his widow; Margaret Noon, a daughter; Bernard and Charles Noon, sons; Blanche Noon of Exira, Iowa, a sister; Clarence Noon of Sparta, Wis., and Bruce Noon of San Francisco, brothers; Judge Whitty, his father-in-law, and Mrs. Robert Mitchell, a sister-in-law, both of Seattle.
