F. B. REYNOLDS CAME HERE TO LECTURE AND REMAINED TO SEEK JUSTICESHIP

Candidate Has Wide Experience in Law

THE candidacy of Frank B. Reynolds of Billings for the two-year term as associate justice of the supreme court presents to the voters a man of thorough and extensive legal experience with eight years spent as a judge.

Mr. Reynolds was born on his father's farm in Michigan, January 20, 1874. When a boy he moved with his parents to Coldwater, where he graduated from the high school with the class of 1891. He afterward pursued a two-year special literary course in the University of Michigan and then entered upon the study of law in the same institution, graduating with the class of 1895. He was immediately admitted to the bar, and, in association with his father, then practicing law in Coldwater, he began his professional career.

He served three years as city attorney of Coldwater and two years as circuit court commissioner of Branch county, Michigan. In the fall of 1900 he was elected probate judge on the Republican ticket and in 1904 was re-elected, thus serving eight years in that office. He declined re-nomination which was urged upon him, in order to move to Montana. His record as judge was exceptionally good in that during the full eight years that he served, only one of his decisions was reversed.

In the spring of 1908 Mr. Reynolds came to Billings to deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Upon this visit he became so much in love with Montana that he immediately decided to return to Michigan, close out his business affairs there, and return to Billings for his permanent home. This he did, arriving in Billings in April, 1909.

Since coming to Montana, Mr. Reynolds has been engaged in the active practice of law and has taken part in many important cases. His practice has been state and federal courts and his reputation is such that he numbers among his clients not only business men of Montana, but also prominent business men of adjoining states.

In his trial work Mr. Reynolds has exhibited unusual fairness, which has always made an impression upon the jury and which indicates a disposition that especially fits him for judicial work.

While Mr. Reynolds has been a very busy man in the practice of his profession, yet his is such a character that he has felt his obligations to society and in his life has given a great deal of attention to the public interests of the community. He is serving as a trustee of the Billings Commercial club, which represents the business and civic interests of Billings and the surrounding country. He can always be counted upon to give active support to any proposition that involves the advancement of public interests.

Mr. Reynolds came from strong American stock, his forefathers being pioneers of the colonial days. His paternal great-grandfather served in the revolutionary war and at one time was held as a prisoner of war on a British vessel in New York harbor. His father served in the war of the rebellion and Frank B. Reynolds himself served in the Spanish-American war as color sergeant of the Thirty-second Michigan volunteer infantry. He was discharged with honorable mention.

Courtship and Marriage

By Betty Vincent

"Dear Miss Vincent: I have become acquainted with a young man and after a short time he had to go to France. While over there we corresponded frequently. On his return he made a visit at my home and several times since. While at my home he couldn't do enough for me. I like him very much and he seems to like me. He lives in Cleveland and I do not see him often, but I don't object to this because we correspond. But here is the trouble: I always say something which he takes the the wrong way and I can't make him see it in the right light. I love to poke fun at him, but he never sees it that way. I have not received an answer to may last letter and it is now two weeks. What do you advise?

"BERTHA R."

Perhaps it is a very good thing you have corresponded, although this same thing often happens when young men call on young girls. Evidently you have a keen sense of humor which your young man utter lacks. If you can't be more barrassment and trepidation. The good times that I expect to have this summen depend entirely on your advice.

"LOUIS T. M."

No, indeed, Louis, your good times depend upon yourself rather than my advice. What I tell you is only on cold paper written in black ink and you have to put into effect with real animation by using your tongue and making your lips smile and say the very things that other fellows say. You are entirely too self-conscious. Forget yourself and make friends with the young ladies you meet just as you would with any new male acquaintances.
